Malitah Oil and Gas extends prequalification deadline

Saga deep read · 04 November 2026 · Score 62

Malitah Oil and Gas Company, a subsidiary of Libya's National Oil Corporation, has extended the deadline for a prequalification invitation related to an active tender process. The extension applies to companies seeking to enter and participate in the procurement exercise as described in the original tender notice issued through the NOC's subsidiary tendering channel.

The specific scope of work, tender value, and revised submission deadline are not disclosed in the notice, which is published in Arabic and directed at contractors already familiar with the tender documentation. Malitah is an NOC subsidiary with upstream and midstream operations in Libya, and procurement notices of this type typically relate to field services, equipment supply, maintenance contracts, or infrastructure works connected to its production assets.

Libya's upstream sector has shown gradual recovery following years of political instability, with the NOC working to restore and expand output capacity across its subsidiary portfolio. Malitah, as one of the operating companies under the NOC umbrella, periodically issues tenders for technical and operational services as part of ongoing field maintenance and development programmes. The prequalification extension signals active procurement activity and suggests the company is widening the pool of eligible contractors, potentially to attract international service providers who may require additional time to prepare submissions.

For international oil and gas service companies, Libya remains a challenging but commercially significant market. Prequalification processes are a formal gateway into Libyan NOC-subsidiary contracting, and securing approved vendor status with entities such as Malitah is a prerequisite for bid participation. Companies that are not yet prequalified with NOC subsidiaries should treat extension notices as an explicit window to submit credentials before the revised deadline closes.

Why this matters to partners and clients of Saga

This is an open prequalification extension — the earliest formal stage of a Libyan NOC subsidiary procurement process — making it an actionable window for Norwegian service companies to submit vendor credentials directly. Partners not yet registered with Malitah or the broader NOC approved-vendor list should prioritise submission before the extended deadline. Saga recommends immediate outreach to identify the tender scope and prepare prequalification documentation, as securing approved-vendor status is a prerequisite for all subsequent bid participation.

PARTNER ANGLES

- Drilling: Drilling contractors and rig service companies should submit prequalification documents now to gain approved-vendor status with Malitah ahead of any upcoming well workover or development drilling tenders.
- Subsea/FPSO: If the tender scope covers offshore or nearshore production infrastructure, subsea equipment suppliers and FPSO support service providers should use the extended window to enter the prequalification process.
- Service: Well services, maintenance, and inspection companies should treat this extension as a direct invitation to register with Malitah, establishing a commercial foothold in the recovering Libyan upstream market.
- Pipeline: Pipeline integrity, inspection, and repair contractors active in North Africa should evaluate whether Malitah's tender scope aligns with midstream or gathering system maintenance requirements.
