Libya's Al-Zawiya Refinery tenders roof and lighting upgrade

Saga deep read · 08 October 2026 · Score 50

Al-Zawiya Oil Refining Company, a subsidiary of Libya's National Oil Corporation (NOC), has issued a call for tenders covering the replacement of the roof and lighting system at the filling and processing units of its oil blending and filling plant. The tender represents a defined procurement opportunity at an active refining facility on the Libyan coast west of Tripoli.

The scope as described covers structural and electrical works within the blending and filling plant: specifically, roof replacement and a new lighting system across the filling and processing units. While the tender notice does not disclose an estimated contract value or a submission deadline beyond what is implied by the active call, it is a formal NOC-subsidiary procurement process, meaning interested parties would engage directly through NOC's established tendering procedures.

Al-Zawiya refinery is one of Libya's principal refining assets, processing crude into refined products for the domestic market. Maintenance and upgrade tenders of this nature reflect ongoing efforts by NOC subsidiaries to sustain and modernise ageing plant infrastructure — a recurring operational priority across Libya's downstream sector, where years of conflict and underinvestment have left many facilities requiring systematic rehabilitation.

For international service and industrial companies, this tender falls into the category of facility maintenance and civil-electrical works rather than upstream oil and gas services. The works described — roofing and industrial lighting installation — are general industrial contracting in character, though they sit within a regulated NOC procurement framework that Norwegian and European companies occasionally access through local Libyan partners or joint ventures with firms already registered with NOC.

The security and operational environment in western Libya, while improved relative to the conflict peak years, continues to require careful due diligence from any company considering direct engagement. Companies interested in NOC subsidiary tenders are advised to confirm registration status with NOC, assess local partner arrangements, and review the full tender documents once issued through official NOC channels.

Why this matters to partners and clients of Saga

This is a signed, active tender from an NOC subsidiary, so direct procurement engagement is appropriate for companies with relevant capabilities and NOC registration. However, the scope — roofing and industrial lighting — sits outside core Norwegian oil and gas service competencies, making this primarily relevant to companies with broader industrial maintenance or facilities management offerings active in North Africa. Norwegian firms without existing Libyan partnerships or NOC registration should treat this as a monitoring item and focus relationship-building efforts on upstream NOC tenders where specialist subsea, drilling, or process technology competencies command stronger positioning.

PARTNER ANGLES

- Service: Industrial services companies with facility maintenance or EPC capabilities and existing NOC registration should review tender documents and assess bid viability through a qualified local Libyan partner.
- Drilling: No direct drilling angle; monitor NOC's broader tender pipeline for upstream workover or drilling rehabilitation tenders where Norwegian drilling-service competencies are directly applicable.
- Subsea/FPSO: No subsea or FPSO relevance in this tender; use NOC relationship contacts developed here to track offshore rehabilitation tenders at Libyan coastal and marine facilities.

- Pipeline: Pipeline and process-infrastructure companies active in Libya should note NOC's active tendering posture and position for upcoming plant and transfer-line rehabilitation scopes beyond this immediate works package.
